

There's enough gazpacho in the kitchen to swim in.

MOOD:  hungry

Did the gazpacho fairy come by?

Thank you

...And there goes the weekend

But hey, we got a day and a half of this one! And I got to sleep in for two whole mornings. Too bad

The mild acids of gazpacho are, in fact, beneficial to the skin.

I tell you this only now that the gazpacho is gone, since if you had tried to swim in it, we'd have killed you.

See what a good friend I am?

So I went a little overboard on the tomatoes....

Oh, I would definitely not say that.

Well, I made a ton of gazpacho. And used some of it for ceviche. And then realized I didn't actually want any more...

...and that I had hungry friends! Win!

Pfft. No such thing.

(...I wouldn't mind a visit from the gazpacho fairy, 'cept for the thing about being on the wrong end of the continent...)

I've been trying to explain gazpacho to the able-handed/house cook Sis. Fairies might help!

Dang it! And I was in D.C. yesterday, too. I wonder if the Gazpacho Fairies deliver to Dulles International?

No, no, gazpacho happens spontaneously if you have enough tomatoes in the garden, plus other veg hanging around as a catalyst. Nothing supernatural involved.

Am I the only one who hears gazpacho and immediately thinks Rimmer? Of course, if I'm the only one who gets that reference then I just answered my own question. ;)

Dunno if it's the correct reference (it's been a lo-o-o-long time since I've watched the show), but I immediately started humming "It's cold out there..."

::giggles:: Yep, that's the reference. Nice to know I'm not the only one then. ;)

It sounds like the gazpacho ferry came in. That sort of surface ship is probably one of the few things a submariner wouldn't consider "tonnage". As long as the ferry was delivering to the SUBASE, that is.

Thank you
